

Sustainability Programs/Corporate Advice:

Issue:

Environmentally or ecologically sustainable development (ESD) and operations is becoming entrenched in organisational charters.

Although commendable in theory, putting sustainability into practice is often not straight forward and can require a step – change in an organisations culture and activities.

Expertise:

EnviroRisk Management has been advising some of Australia's leading organisations for over eight (8) years. Our role(s) include quarterly updates on new or pending issues likely to influence operations or decisions; participation on sustainability committees; and technical advisors to board; development of EMS's that embrace sustainability reviewing the adequacy of practices and goods against sustainable outcomes.

Solution:

Our in-house and network of technical and managerial skills have proven instrumental in assisting organisations embrace and deliver sustainable solutions to environmental problems.

We can, and have, integrated sustainable practices in EMS and strategic plans.

“Your practical approach and technical knowhow are to be commended.”
